Terry Halbert, Elaine Ingulli : CyberEthics before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised CyberEthics:

An increasing dependence on e-commerce doesn't have to blur the line on ethical business practices. Spotlighting such recent cases as Napster, Microsoft and notHarvard.com, this unique book focuses on the ethical dilemmas relating to computer technology and the Internet. It offers readers helpful insight into the complex ethical issues related to intellectual property, copyright, privacy, gambling, virus attacks, cyberstalking, e-learning and many other Internet-related topics. A special focus on global issues reflects the ethical issues unique to the modern global marketplace.

About the Author Terry Halbert is Professor of Legal Studies at Temple University's Fox School of Business Management. Her research and teaching is interdisciplinary, focusing on business ethics and public policy concerns.

Professor Halbert has developed industry-specific courses on the tobacco industry and on gambling in which students take up each issue from several perspectives: history, sociology, law, ethics, economics, race/class/gender, literature, and film. She has served as a staff editor for the AMERICAN BUSINESS LAW JOURNAL since 1995 and is a member of the Pennsylvania Bar. In 1999, she received Temple's Great Teacher award. A believer in experiential learning, Professor Halbert teaches an Executive MBA course in which managers discuss and analyze the ethical dilemmas they face at work. She earned her JD from Rutgers University, Camden. Elaine Ingulli is Professor of Business Law at Richard A. Stockton College of New Jersey and a member of the Pennsylvania and New York Bars. Professor Ingulli teaches courses in business law, the legal environment, and international business law, as well as in sex discrimination and women's studies. She is the author of numerous journal articles and a cofounder of the Feminist Legal Studies Section of the Academy of Legal Studies in Business. Professor Ingulli is active in women's and environmental issues. She earned her JD from Hofstra University.
