O'Brien actually teaches my Trusts and Estates class; I love the book as much as I love his teaching style. (The subject is also interesting, but I digress.) I only wish the electronic version had actual page numbers, because I am forced to reference our library copy when I get lost for pages.

The third edition continues the use of fact-driven judicial decisions to illustrate transfer of wealth via non-probate transfers, Last Will and Testaments, and intestate succession. This casebook includes status developments, such as same-sex marriage and assisted reproductive technology. Unique to this edition is the discussion of self-settled asset protection trusts, trust protectors, and socially responsible investing. Recognizing the fact of the aging generations, the casebook is unique in its coverage of long-term housing payment options, federal and state entitlement programs designed for seniors, and options necessary for planning for incapacity.
