By Pat Patrick If you live in Louisiana, are getting older and have property you need to protect this book is for you. Buy it read it and follow up on what to do. It won't be cheap but it beats losing the property as several people I know have after death of a family member. Remember this is Louisiana and we got our own laws here.

Protect Your Estate for Your Loved Ones. You've worked hard building your estate whether large or small. Louisiana's estate planning laws are different from all other states laws. This book will teach you what you need to know to protect your estate for yourself and your loved ones.

Paul Rabalais does a great job making complicated legal strategies simple. I recommend this book and his services to all of my clients who need estate planning help. --- MacAllyn J. Achee, Baton Rouge, LA attorney Paul takes complicated legal topics and describes them in a way that makes them simple enough for anyone to understand. --- Marcel Dupre, President, Wealthplanners, LLC Everyone who lives in Louisiana and wants to protect their estate for themselves and their family should read this book. --- Gary L. Magee, Baton Rouge, LA, CPA About the Author Paul A. Rabalais discovered the benefits of estate planning at an early age. At the age of eight, he received an inheritance from his grandmother. The fruits of his inheritance helped him pay for his college and law school education. In 1987, Paul graduated from Louisiana State University with a degree in Finance. In 1990, he earned his law degree from LSU Law School. Paul furthered his knowledge of estate planning and the federal tax system by earning a Masters Degree in Tax Law from Boston University School of Law in 1991. From 1991 through 1994, Paul worked for some of the top law firms in the State of Louisiana. In early 1995, Paul started his own estate planning law firm. Paul has provided estate planning legal services to thousands of clients through his law firm. He has written numerous articles on various aspects of estate planning, and he has given hundreds of seminars on estate planning.
