Dragoljub Popovic : European Human Rights Law - A Manual: An Introduction to the Strasbourg Court and Its Jurisprudence before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised European Human Rights Law - A Manual: An Introduction to the Strasbourg Court and Its Jurisprudence:

European human rights law is a body of law which has emerged from the provisions of the European Convention on Human Rights. Besides the Convention, its sources also encompass the soft-law of the Council of Europe and, recently, the ever growing practice of the Committee of Ministers of the Council of Europe. However, the most significant and by far the most abundant among its sources is the case law of the European Court of Human Rights, seated in Strasbourg. The jurisprudence of the Court constitutes the core substance of this volume. Written for students and practitioners, its principal purpose is to supply basic introductory information on European human rights law, as developed by the Court in Strasbourg. The stage of development in European human rights law, as well as its importance in everyday life, are evident in the book.

"This book goes far beyond its modest aim, namely that of serving as an introduction for students and practitioners. In reality, it is an important monograph which felicitously combines an explanation of the Court's functioning with a presentation of its case-law." Dean Spielmann - President of the European Court of Human Rights "Dragoljub Popovic has managed to link judiciously his scholarship expertise to his analytical insights of a practicing judge to the Court. This he has done in an indeed impressive manner: his meticulous exegesis is uncannily clear and simple, but never simplifying." Prof. Lidija R. Basta Fleiner - Vice-President, Advisory Committee on the Framework Convention for the Protection of National Minorities About the Author Dragoljub Popovic has been a Judge of the European Court of Human Rights since 26 January 2005
