More people than ever are choosing to represent themselves in court and use the library as their primary, if not only, source for obtaining accurate, up-to-date legal information and legal research advice. Finding the Answers to Legal Questions: A How-To-Do-It is a comprehensive guide to help public librarians confidently assist users in finding the legal information they need whether for self-representation, to be an informed consumer of legal service, or to learn the U.S. legal system, the workings of the courts, and common questions likely to arise. Authors Virginia Tucker and Marc Lampson provide a clearly organized, easy-to-use resource packed with guidance to help librarians answer questions that span the gamut of the law. There is an overview of fundamental legal information, including the basic structure of the U.S. legal system and primary law, and how-to instructions for finding primary law in print sources, free websites, and pay-for-view databases. The authors share tips for conducting a legal reference interview and describe common legal questions across a number of different areas, including lawsuits, family law, landlord-tenant disputes, wills and estate planning, debt, bankruptcy, employment, and criminal law. The authors also explain how to build a basic legal reference collection, including a how-to guide for creating a basic website of legal links and for building a small, low-cost collection of print resources. Finding the Answers to Legal Questions: A How-To-Do-It Manual is an ideal book for practicing librarians looking to better serve users' legal needs, as well as for LIS faculty and students preparing for careers as public librarians.

From Booklist Tucker and Lampson have written an impressive guide that introduces the structure of the legal system in the U.S.; provides the basics of legal research; offers specific guidance for commonly asked legal questions, such as landlord-tenant disputes, wills, and employment issues; and concludes with a guide for building a reference collection and producing a website of resources. The volume is also a bibliography unto itself, with citations to print resources and both free and fee-based websites and databases provided throughout. Libraries of all types lacking both a legal reference collection and staff with sufficient expertise in the area are often called upon to provide assistance and direction to those seeking legal information. This book will help libraries serve that need. --Christopher McConnell "Tucker and Lampson have written an impressive guide...The volume is also a bibliography unto itself, with citations to print resources and both free and fee-based websites and databases provided throughout.
